

Penelope Sanchez

What is your style?

I am an introvert person. Logical, Organized, Analytical, Questioning, and Cautions.

Executives are representatives of tradition and order, utilizing their understanding of what is right, wrong and socially acceptable to bring families and communities together. Embracing the values of honesty, dedication and dignity, people with the Executive personality type are valued for their clear advice and guidance, and they happily lead the way on difficult paths. Taking pride in bringing people together, Executives often take on roles as community organizers, working hard to bring everyone together in celebration of cherished local events, or in defense of the traditional values that hold families and communities together.

When do you like people to approach you and how?

Executives' friendships of dependability and mutual interest can be powerful connections that endure life's changes with immutable constancy.

I don't usually feel comfortable in new places. I prefer to be introduced to new people by people I already know because I don't like to make new friends in a meeting by myself. Also, I consider myself a nice person and I like to make friends. However, I am not a person who likes to start conversations. Also, because English is not my first language, I became a more reserved and shyer person since I came to United States. So, I'd rather continue a conversation than start it. In conclusion. I prefer to meet people in a group and not individually.

According with my test. Executive personality type can't ever be accused of not doing enough to fend off a little boredom. While Executives may not always be the life of the party, they know how to play their part in making sure their friends have a good time.

What do you value?

The gospel is one of the things I value most. I know that our Heavenly Father helps us make the right decisions and achieve our goals to return to his presence with our families. Finally, I value hard work. I am in a position where I highly value education because I believe that education can help us find ways to improve our financial situation.

Test. Executive personality type take them up when they are the right thing to do, and they will be finished so long as they remain the right thing to do.

How do you like people to communicate with you?

Executives are strong, traditional friends who appreciate loyalty and shared values. Friendships with the Executive personality type are often defined by their mutual activities and routines, by external factors, more so than the sense of intellectual or mystical compatibility that many Analyst and Diplomat personalities share among themselves.

I am a direct person. Likewise, I try to speak in a courteous and well-founded manner, but without entering into controversy. Also, I'm not a person who likes to attract attention. I am a person who likes to make a group of friends and spend my time alone with them. Finally, I find it hard to accept changes in general. In conclusion, I like people to approach me in a polite and measured way.

Test. Executives trust facts far more than abstract ideas or opinions. Straightforward statements and information are king, and Executive personalities return the honesty (whether it's wanted or not).

How do you make decisions?

I am an indecisive person. Thus, in my experience, I learned that the more information I have, the easier it is for me to make better decisions. So I am one of the typical people who make a list of pros and cons and spend a lot of time thinking about what is the best decision.

According with the test. Too Focused on Social Status – Executives take pride in the respect of their friends, colleagues, and community and while difficult to admit, are very concerned with public opinion. Executives can get so caught up in meeting others' expectations that they fail to address their own needs.

How can people help you?

I am not a proud person. It's usually easy for me to ask for help if I have a question. But, for me, it is important that the person who is helping me is kind and patient. In case I feel any ill disposition, I will immediately find a way not to ask that person again. Also, I try to reflect if I really need help before I ask for it because I don't like to bother people. Finally, when I ask for help, I try to learn as much as possible so that I am not always asking for the same help.

Test. Difficulty Expressing Emotion. Thus, I think people could help being patience and try to understand that is hard for me express my ideas.

What will you not tolerate in others?

Over the years I developed a lot of patience. It hasn't been easy and sometimes people think I can be a little rude without meaning to, but I try to control my temper and I am most willing to help people who come to me for help.

Test. Executives are strong adherents to tradition and when suddenly forced to try unvetted solutions, they become uncomfortable and stressed. New ideas suggest that their methods weren't good enough and abandoning what has always worked before in favor of something that may yet fail risks their image of reliability.

What people misunderstand about me

Some people think that being upset is my natural state, but the truth is that since I have a hard time expressing my emotions physically, I can look upset, but I really am not.

Test. Difficult to Relax – This need for respect fosters a need to maintain their dignity, which can make it difficult to cut loose and relax for risk of looking the fool, even in good fun.